

Hi,

I am a broadcast veteran of some 40 years in the business as an on-air performer. Throughout my education (University of North Carolina) and career as a jock and later as a news reporter, I've always remembered one thing: The public owns the airwaves. And secondly, it serves the local community. In recent years what's happened to radio is sad in that ownership is concentrated in large corporations which have no interest in the local community at all.

It is time to reverse this trend and restore local radio where everything from the price of chicken at the local grocery store to the obituaries sponsored by a funeral home could be heard.

Today, there is no connection to the city of license at all.
Only the FCC can fix this!
